CODE AUDIT TERMS

Zagersky, version of 3 November 2026

In short. You give read-only access to your code. Within three working days you get a written report ranked by what to fix first. If it finds nothing worth fixing, you get your money back. The report shows what was found at that moment. It does not prove your app is safe.

§ 1 Who you are dealing with

1. The audit is done by Patryk Sylwerski, os. Sikorskiego 34C/6, 44-240 Żory, Poland (“I”), working under the Zagersky name. Contact: kontakt@zagersky.com.
2. “You” means the person or company ordering the audit. Payment and the invoice are handled by a payment operator, under that operator's own terms, which you accept when you pay.

§ 2 What the audit covers

1. I review one application: its code, its database rules and how it handles login, permissions and payments, as far as these can be seen in the repository and in the running app.
2. You receive a written report in English. Each finding says what is wrong, what could happen and how to fix it, and the report lists what was checked and what wasn't.
3. Fixing is not included. If you want me to make the fixes, we agree a fixed price separately.

§ 3 What you provide

1. Read-only access to the code repository and the address of the running app. A test account helps, if the app has logins.
2. Do not send passwords, API keys or customer data. If you send them by mistake, I'll tell you, delete them and ask you to replace them.
3. You confirm that the app is yours or that you have permission to have it reviewed.
4. I only read. I do not write to your database, attack your app, or test it under load.

§ 4 Price, timing and refund

1. The first three audits cost USD 190, in exchange for permission described in § 7. After that the price is USD 490. The price you pay is the one confirmed before you pay.
2. Payment comes before work starts. The report arrives within three working days of payment and access, counted on Polish working days.
3. If the report contains no finding rated “Fix today”, “Fix before launch” or “Worth fixing”, you get your money back. Ask within 14 days of receiving the report.
4. This is a planned review, with no on-call support and no response time for outages.

§ 5 Limits of the report

1. An audit reduces risk. It cannot find everything, and it describes the code on the day I read it. It is not a guarantee, a security certificate or legal advice, including on data protection law.
2. You decide what to change and remain responsible for your app and your users' data.

§ 6 Your code and AI tools

1. I keep your code and findings confidential and share them with nobody except as stated here. I'll sign your NDA if you have one, provided it fits these terms.

2. I read your code with AI tools, including Anthropic's Claude, so parts of it are sent to that provider for processing. If this is not acceptable for your project, tell me before you pay. I confirm every finding myself before it goes in the report.
3. I delete my working copy within 30 days of delivery, except what the law requires me to keep. You can remove my access as soon as you have the report.
4. If your code holds other people's personal data, and I may see it, tell me first, and we sign a data processing agreement before I start.

§ 7 Description of the result

1. For the first three audits, you allow me to describe the kind of problems found and how they were fixed, without your name, your app's name or anything that identifies you. You see the text before it is published.

§ 8 Liability

1. My total liability for an audit is limited to the amount you paid for it, and I am not liable for lost profit or indirect loss.
2. This does not limit liability for harm caused intentionally, or anything else the law does not allow to be limited.

§ 9 Consumers

1. The audit is meant for businesses and people building a product. If you order it as a consumer, your mandatory consumer rights stay in place, including any right to withdraw from the contract, and they take priority over these terms.

§ 10 Law and disputes

1. Polish law applies, without taking away mandatory rights you have in your own country as a consumer. We try to settle any dispute by email first.

You accept these terms by paying for the audit.
